FICTION

"Children at the Gate" by Lynne Reid Banks. This second novel by the author of "The L-Shaped Room" is set in Israel and tells the moving story of a woman who desperately needs children, and two young orphans numbed by the cruel events of history.

"Heart Troubles" by Stephen Birmingham is the first published collection of short stories by the author of "Our Crowd" and "The Right People." As the title suggests, they tell the story of the troubles, large and small, which beset the human heart — the love and hate, the compromise, and sometimes the solutions which are a part of the heartaches of human living.

"Our Next President" by Russell Baker is the account of a fictional 1968 presidential election in which no candidate has won a majority and the nation faces inauguration day without a president to inaugurate. Names of real persons are used — Johnson, Romney, Reagan, Rockefeller, etc. — and the book shows how the seeds of such a failure to elect a president lie dormant in our Constitution and electoral college system.

NON-FICTION

"Grammar for People Who Wouldn't Have to Worry About It if They Didn't Have Children" by Robert L. Webb. A very funny book with the serious purpose of helping people who must learn better grammar in order to overcome the scorn of their offspring, but prefer to do it with cocktail in hand, and anything but grammar on their minds.

"Sailortown" by Stan Huggill. A fascinating story of sailor towns the world over, from New York to San Diego to Hamburg to Buenos Aires. Illustrated with pen-and-ink sketches and maps by the author.

"Malcolm Boyd's Book of Days" by Malcolm Boyd. This new book by the author of "Are You Running with Me, Jesus?" is concerned not with traditional religious problems, people and places, but with the realities of today — Vietnam, civil rights, sexual freedom, family problems, people and places. The author, an Episcopal priest, lives in Washington, D. C., but ranges the United States as an ecumenical chaplain-at-large to American university students.

"Birth Control" by Ernest Havemann and the editors of Time-Life Books. This down-to-earth book offers important medical information about nine modern contraception techniques. Discussed also are the moral and religious controversies over family planning, abortion and the population explosion. It concludes with a report on research into future methods of birth control.

"The Art of Pennsylvania Dutch Cooking" by Edna Heller. The author grew up in a small town in the Amish and Mennonite farm-lands of Pennsylvania where she learned to cook as a child. She spent many years standardizing such recipe directions as "sugar to sweeten" and "flour to stiffen." The result of her research is this book containing many wonderful recipes for hearty, colorful dishes with names that make the reader eager to try them — names like Shoo-Fly Pie, Sniively Sticks, and Booch-Waitza Gribble.

FOR YOUNG READERS
 The Alfred Hitchcock mystery series. These books, written by Robert Arthur, carry a foreword by Alfred Hitchcock, and are done in his inimitable shivery style made famous by the TV series. For the 10-14-year-old reader.

The Guy Bond pre-primar series. These books constitute a basic reading program in four levels, beginning with "very easy." Each succeeding level adds only a few new words, a list of which is printed at the back of the book.
